“ I live in a 3 storey walk up aptemarnt, it's one bedroom plus a den, my sleeping is in the den with a double bed a dresser, nightstand, cell phone, and no windows. I have been taking water to bed with me as I have done my entire life becuase I find the air dry some nights and need it. I have recently put a fan in there to help circulate the air and sometimes place a wet cloth on the fan to add some moisture to the air. Before and during the time the fan was in my room I brought a glass of water to bed as usual, some nights its in a coffee mug (assuming ceramic) and others its in a tall thick beer stien or a shorter thick fat beer stien I had 4 of them when I moved in 2 months ago and now the last one cracked today they have all cracked on the bottom with it spreading up one side of the glass, its always happened in my room, on the same nightstand, while I'm sleeping. Keep in mind these glasses are very thick, they are stiens I have had for a couple of years as stiens they are often frozen in restaurants/bars and used for beer. So this makes me think they are rather sturdy and durable. I was intrigued when the first one cracked and told my room mate all about it and showed her, then the second happened within a week later, then the third and now the forth I have told people about the first and second one now the 3rd and 4th are making me look crazy lol. I do wake up with sore throat and sinus issues sometimes sleeping in the room, with hard wood floors no carpeting, as uncomfortable as it is when waking up like that but it goes away and hour or two later. I think alot of it has to do with the fan going while I sleep, time to get a humidifier I think. I been joking about ghosts and stuff . energy . but thinking there could be a logical way this is happening. So I will be taking coffee mugs to bed from now on, presumming they are ceramic becuase I have never had them crack perplexing. <http://bqhyizkotzj.com> [url=<http://rnknmute.com>]/url] [link=<http://apjmajjsvrh.com>]/link]
